Friday, May 9, 2013 So, I'm pretty sure I have officially spent over $100 on file shares. I'm also pretty sure that it's been about four weeks since I took this picture: I made a deal with myself that when I had more than $100 of file shares, I would move them into my "virtual file cabinet." I have about $7 in file shares right now, so the cabinet is looking pretty full. But, it is important for me to have my file shares in a place where I can find them. For example, I just couldn't find my file share for this project. When I was organizing my file shares, I noticed that one folder of my file shares just wasn't there. So, I had to look in the virtual file cabinet to find it. It was sitting right there in its entirety. I have come to really appreciate having a file cabinet with file shares in it. I've been using the file share a lot for quick references, but I'm also using it as a place to keep articles I want to return to later, or notes from my writing groups.

When I found it, I realized how useful it is for remembering everything I've written and read. I think I've already mentioned how important this is to me, so I won't go into too much detail on that. I'm starting to see how important it is for me to have these file shares in a file cabinet, and I'm hoping that in the future, I can accomplish my goal of having a full cabinet. I'll also be sure to share more about my file cabinet on the blog.

Q: Get a List of dynamic methods in Typescript I have a dao implemented in typescript as shown below. It takes a list of parameters and calls a function which checks whether the parameters are valid or not. The function is as follows: `private myfunction(param1: string, param2: string): boolean { // checks if param1 is valid // checks if param2 is valid // logic return true; }` So I need to perform unit testing of this method. I have
