I am a new grad, and I have been working in a non-profit for about 6 months now. They told me that I will have a lot of extra duties and responsibilities. A lot of these tasks are things that I am currently not doing. I am a full time employee and cannot do the extra duties, but it seems that there is never a clear explanation of the scope of the job. I feel like I am being taken advantage of and taken advantage of by my boss. I'm not a professional at this point, and I'm not even sure how to fight against this. How can I move forward and get what I deserve? A: Are you sure your employer is doing you wrong? I would be concerned that they are overstaffing, and possibly taking advantage of your naivety and inexperience. However, if you have received a job offer, there is not much you can do except ask them to address your concerns, or walk away. Now, even though you seem unhappy with your current circumstances, you should know what your rights are and be aware of your rights in order to protect yourself. Your employment contract should define
