I have a Dell Studio 1555 laptop which came with Windows 7 Home Premium pre-installed. I have since installed Ubuntu Studio 13.10 (64-bit). The video hardware is Geforce GTX 770, but I have read that this card works with the blob driver for OpenGL, and that it may not work at all with the open source Nouveau driver. This laptop came with a three-cell battery, and I know it doesn't have one now, but I still have the battery installed. How do I configure Eclipse to run to take advantage of this new battery? A: I don't think there's a solution for battery charge configuration in Ubuntu but there's at least a workaround for ba244e880a
