At least 70 militants were killed in an Israeli air strike against a Hamas military post in Rafah on Tuesday, according to Palestinian media. The missile attack on a fortified position of the armed group in southern Gaza killed more than 70 militants and wounded another 200, a senior Hamas official said. "This attack shows the unbreakable will of our people to continue their fight," said Sami Abu Zuhri, Hamas's spokesperson. Zuhri said no Israelis were hurt in the attack, which took place in a border area between Rafah and Khan Younis. Hamas' Military Wing Commander Abu Yousef said three of the dead were Israeli soldiers. Hamas "is preparing to escalate its resistance," Zuhri said, adding that Israel has "doubled the number of settlers on the border and is trying to establish an apartheid state." He also criticized the Palestinian Authority in the West Bank for "issuing a general alert." Around 20 Israeli air strikes took place in Gaza late on Monday, as the military warned that Hamas had launched more than 50 rockets at southern Israeli towns since Saturday evening. The air raids hit at least six targets in Gaza, while the military targeted at least 15 rocket launchers and eight positions in the coastal strip, a military spokesman said. No Palestinian casualties were reported. The escalation comes two days after a ceasefire between Israel and Palestinian militants in Gaza fell apart. Three Israeli soldiers and an Israeli border police officer were killed in clashes with Palestinian militants over the weekend, with Hamas claiming responsibility for the attack. Israel and Hamas have been locked in an increasingly violent conflict for some five years. 1.
